3. The following is evidence of the regime's policy of granting special privileges to Government officials, i.e. the "New Aristocracy".

- a. In the ministries, every two or three months, the majority of officials receive a bonus of from 30% to 40% of their monthly salary.
- b. A special bonus is allotted once a year, the amount of which depends on the rank held in the official hierarchy.
- c. Higher officials receive an allocation of clothing materials twice a year, lower officials once a year. The highest officials are now obliged to appear at official receptions in dinner jackets, the cloth for which is allotted to them. Likewise they may make use of the services of an official tailor, whose charge for making a suit is 1,500 zloty, whereas the ordinary price is 11,000 - 15,000 zloty.
- d. The highest officials receive free medical treatment in special State hospitals.

- e. Government apartments are allocated to high officials at exceptionally low rents. Irrespective of the number of members in their families, these officials have apartments of many rooms, whereas the general public has to comply with the housing regulations which lay down exact numbers per dwelling.
- f. Higher officials may enjoy additional sources of income, since they are allowed to hold several posts. Articles written for the press and radio broadcasts are also well paid.
- g. The highest grade officials, at ministerial levels, receive considerable allowances for the entertainment of foreign representatives. In addition to luxurious, free Government apartments, they are also supplied from special kitchens maintained at the expense of the State.
